

COMMITTED TO HELPING MEMBERS SUCCESSFULLY NAVIGATE THEIR FINANCIAL JOURNEY

How secure are you at 30,000 feet up?

Everybody loves a vacation, but some people don't like flying. If you're worried about turbulence, don't let it hold you back from flying to faraway places. Experts say turbulence is normal. It's a common part of flying every day. Even when turbulence is most severe, it's rarely dangerous. Planes are built to withstand severe turbulence for long periods of time.

Here are a few facts that might help you book your next flight:

- Fly the largest jet possible. You'll feel fewer bumps.
- Avoid turbulence by booking an early morning flight when the air is smoother.
- Book a seat near the center of the plane, over the wings, or toward the front of the aircraft. These areas are more stable.
- Book winter flights with more southerly routes to avoid inclement weather.
- Pilots are highly-skilled and highly trained for all types of weather.

Don't let fear hold you back from missing out on the vacation of a lifetime. When you're ready to plan your trip, use our Visa Platinum Preferred credit card for a low fixed rate and earn valuable reward points to keep you flying.
